ABSTRACT

The 1978 directory of the California Indian community provides tribes, urban centers, organizations, government agencies, and individuals with a tool to improve communications. The first section contains maps of trust lands, tribal locations, terminated lands, and terminated land locations. The two indexes in the map section (one provides information on the 83 California tribes and one provides information on the 37 terminated tribes) are arranged alphabetically by reservation/rancheria and contain the map page number, mailing address, acreage, population membership (resident), county (congressional district), and relevant Bureau of Indian Affairs Agency. The last section contains a listing of approximately 360 California Indian organizations, state agencies, and federal agencies. The listing is arranged alphabetically by city and then by organization within the city. (AH)

Introduction

The purpose of this directory is to provide tribes, urban centers, organizations, government agencies and individuals with a tool to improve communications within the California Indian community. In order to maintain simplicity, all listings are alphabetized first by city then by organization.

Any directory is current only for a short period of time. Programs, funding and personnel constantly change. For these reasons, we have attempted to list the more permanent organizations.

If you are unsuccessful in reaching a desired listing, try another one in the same area. Most Indian organizations are information centers for their community and are willing to help.

While it is not the intent of this directory to list every organization, if yours isn't included fill out the form below for future consideration. You can also make a change in your current listing in the same manner.
